TEN MOST IMPORTANT JEWS IN CANADA IN 1926

By Herbert J. Samuel

A new pastime has been introduced by some of the American Jewish periodicals, in the selection of lists of most representative Jews. Thus we have varying estimates as to the ten Jews who have done most for America, the foremost five or ten Jews in some particular city, the most notworthy Jews during 1925, and so forth. Some of these lists are decided by popular vote; some by journalists out for patronage. It may be asked whether there is any value in such lists. If they succeed in doing nothing more, they serve a purpose in calling the attention of the man on the street to the existence of men and women whose services to their community are worthy of notice. But they also have a value in making us consider upon what basis we would decide whether a particular individual should be included in the category of those who have placed the community under a debt whose lives are useful. The very excellent "Summary of Events of Jewish Interest," issued monthly by the American Jewish Committee, contains, besides references to important happenings and information helpful for a study of those happenings, a record of appointments, honours, elections, bequests and special gifts, and deaths. The "Summary" supplies abundant proof that there is a great wealth of Jewish contribution to all the worthy activities of life. It constitutes a corrective to the idea that Jewish life in America is empty and fading away. The public, as a rule, gets to know only a few of the more prominent names, and prominence does not always come in true proportion to merit. The mere attainment of a public honour does not invariably entitle a Jew to recognition as one of Jewry's great leaders. There are many who make distinctive contributions to the enrichment of Jewish life and its progress; who set their brethren thinking on important issues; who create movements that further the general culture; and who never receive that type of recognition that is signalized by what men are pleased to call "honours." The much prophesied earldom for Sir Herbert Samuel will not enhance his contribution to British welfare. It may advertise it a little more, and elicit a chorus of Jewish exultation on his adoption of a non-Jewish name and title, but it will not make his life's work any the more valuable. Nevertheless, it will not be displeasing to know that a great Jew has been found fit for inclusion in the ranks of the British nobility.

A recent article in an American paper, or papers, selected the following five Jews as the biggest Jews of 1925: Julius Rosenwald, Ludwig Lewisohn, Benny Friedman, Sophie Irene Loeb and Walter Lippmann. Julius Rosenwald is recognized as one of America's foremost givers." His benefactions are unstinted and not limited to any one favourite cause. He is characterized for his lack of bombast in giving, his humility and dislike of the spirit of patronage. Ludwig Lewisohn is selected for his "Israel," which, according to the writer, has led Christians to have done more for his fellow-Jews than innumerable committees of good-will between Christian and Jew. Benny Friedman is "causing the members of his race to revise the

HAMANS, OLD AND NEW

By Ferdinand M. Isserman

The festival of Purim, commemorating the traditional salvation of Jews from the plottings of the Persian Haman, is with us. The theme of the book of Esther, which records the failure of Haman's conspiracy, is a perennial one. Attempts to destroy or annihilate the Jew are unfortunately not few in Jewish history. Alongside of Haman we can place Pharaoh, Antiochus Epiphanes, Torquemada, etc., etc. We might mention some modern names, but they have received sufficient publicity. As we reminisce over the motif of Purim, we may well ask ourselves who are the Hamans to-day. Immediately our mind conjures up some well-known Anti-Semites. But these are not the menace to the Jew's survival. These do make things uncomfortable for us, but, after all, malevolence carries its own sting, and spiritually it is far better to be persecuted than the persecutor. And history's verdict of the oppressor will be what it is of Haman. The Anti-Semite may mar the Jewish body, but he cannot defile the Jewish soul, and there is no more precious possession than a soul unsoiled and unsullied. The Haman to-day, or rather the menace to Jewish continuance, is not in an external form, but is rather the growing indifference to Judaism. Nor do we blame the indifferentist. Judaism has failed to hold him. What is wrong? Has Judaism lost its appeal? Can it not satisfy the spiritual wants of men, or are men not aware of their spiritual wants? The men and women who come to synagogues generally do not come to pray—they come to be entertained by a lecture or by a lecturer. The synagogue must resort to all sorts of methods to induce its people to come. That is the real problem facing world Jewry. It calls for critical self-examination and a revaluation of Judaism and of ourselves. We must discover the cancer that menaces Jewish spirituality. That is the new Haman, not the clamant mob, nor the Hakenkreutzer, nor the hooded bands, but on the one hand the failure of Judaism to satisfy the spiritual wants and on the other hand the failure of Jews to feel spiritual needs. Is Judaism at fault or are Jews at fault? "The fault, dear Brutus, lies not in our stars, but in ourselves" Not the Haman without, but the Haman within.

WHERE WERE THE POLISH JEWS?

A widely heralded, well advertised mass meeting of Polish Jews was held in Toronto last Sunday. On Sunday morning the "Hebrew Journal" carried on its front page the figure of a bearded, venerable Jew whose hands were stretched supplicatingly heavenward as if he were inquiring, with the Psalmist, "Whence cometh any help?" That Jew was the symbol of Polish Jewry brought to the verge of starvation by an economic crisis and by a malevolent administration. It was a vivid appeal to the Polish Jews of Toronto to come to the mass meeting in the afternoon. The committee in charge of managements had invited a regiment of orators for the occasion, and despite all these well-laid plans, no more than 200 people appeared at the meeting, and of these 200 some were children, and a good number were women. Fully sixty per cent. of the Jewish population of Toronto, we are told,

DAUGHTER OF NORDAU ON LECTURE TOUR

Mlle. Maxa Nordau, daughter of the late Dr. Max Nordau, will lecture at the Windsor Hall, Montreal, March 7, on "The Feminist Movement in the Various Countries of Europe," modern tendencies in art and literature. She will also give intimate reminiscences of her father. Renée Strauss, comparing father and daughter, writes:

Critical, unconventional, fearless, accurate, pessimist-optimist. That was Dr. Max Nordau, whose death early in 1923 removed one of the most colourful personalities of the last half-century. Not that Nordau could be categorized. Few were the realms of human activity into which he had not delved, and in most cases become master of. Physician by vocation, philosopher by temperament, journalist by circumstances, critic by racial inheritance, dramatist and novelist by avocation. Strangest of all his years of dynamic activity in the general world did not dim his Jewish consciousness.

To the European, Max Nordau was pre-eminently philosopher and critic, mordant and fearless. To world-Jewry, Max Nordau represented an outstanding champion of the rights of his people. To the average man of letters, Nordau was the author of "Degeneration," "On Art and Artists," "The Conventional Lies of Civilization," "Paradoxes" and innumerable other volumes. To the Jew, Nordau was the colleague of Dr. Herzl, inseparable leaders in the molding of the ultimate destiny of the Zionist movement. There were many, of course, to whom Nordau was anathema, both among Zionist and non-Zionist. The attitude that a minor few adopted toward Nordau is evidenced in an incident which occured in Paris, December, 1903. At that time Herzl and Nordau were considering the British Government's offer of land for a Jewish settlement in East Africa. Both men were immediately accused of treason to the cause of Palestine, and during a Zionist ball in Paris, a Jew named Louban Chain Selik fired two shots at Nordau unsuccessfully.

Nordau was not by any means a mere dreamer and visionary. His role as Europe's most ruthless critic did not interfere with his intimate knowledge of world affairs. He was just as much and as outstandingly a politician as a philosopher. His reputation along the former lines reached even to America. For many years before his death he was a regular contributor to the "New York American" on European politics. His keen insight and analytical powers no doubt secured for him the position of Paris correspondent of the Vienna "Neue Freie Presse," which position was generally considered more important than that of Austrian Ambassador to France. It was the correspondent who recorded French public opinion and the attitude of the Government, and thus molded sentiment in Austria. Those who knew him well remember how his elaborate rooms in Paris, before the War, were constantly visited by France's foremost men and women of affairs. While he was discussing philosophy with a member of the French Academy, there were usually in the ante-room an eminent painter coming to ask Nordau's opinion on his latest work, a duchess needing the physician's care, a member of the prevailing French Cabinet anxious to ask Nordau's opinion on a certain political matter and a producer offering to stage Nordau's latest drama.

But above and beyond Nordau's other distinguishing characteristics was his unsurpassed power of oratory. Whether he was upbraiding the modernists in art and literature, whether he was denouncing the adoption of a new political programme, or whether he was appealing to Jews to come to the aid of Zion, he was equally effective and convincing. There is not another Jew in modern times, probably, who1 has achieved a reputation equal to Nordau's for power of oratory. Had he not devoted most of his life to the arts, Nordau would undoubtedly have become one of Europe's leading statesmen.

His labours for his country, his zealous interest in his people, were miserably rewarded during the last years of his life. France proved as fickle as Israel. Just as the War started, Nordau denounced the Germans and their manifest programme. Sometime afterward, however, he attacked the French Government for the tactics which he had decried when employed by the others. For this fearlessness he was exiled to Spain, his property and all his possessions were confiscated (and have not been returned to his family even to this day) and Nordau was inscribed on the French Government's blacklist.

The propaganda which permeated the United States during the War must have left some smirch on the name of Nordau, even as it did on that of other eminent Europeans. But Dr. Nax Nordau is at last to be vindicated. The unuttered thoughts he amassed, the unpublished writings he collected during the period of his exile are now to be revealed for the first time. With the announcement that Nordau's only daughter, Maxa, is to come to America for a lecture tour, philosophers, literary critics, artists and dramatists are already preparing to pay homage to a notable daughter of a pre-eminent father.

It was well known to his friends that Nordau always looked upon Maxa as his intellectual successor; he felt that the mantle of his intellectual heritage had fallen upon her. Even in the busiest hours of his life, he found time to tell her stories which were later gathered together in that childhood classic: "Stories I Told My Maxa from the Age of Four to Seven." Maxa was always by the side of her father. Constantly travelling with him, she acquired almost as extensive a range of languages as Nordau himself. Always accompanying her father, she lived in almost every continental country where she studied music, painting, art and literature. She finally chose painting as her vocation. Her temperament has attracted her to the most modern school, but believing with her father that one can afford to be modern and original only after one has mastered the fundamentals, she has gone through the most thorough classic training. Though now only twenty-six her canvasses and etchings have received very favourable comment in the Continental press and from some of Europe's most famous critics.

During the days of the war, when Nordau lived mostly in Spain, Maxa was continually at his side, acting as his secretary, his confidant and companion. She has been the recipient of his most intimate confidences, and undoubtedly when speaking of her father, will reveal a Nordau who has not yet been described anywhere, the Nordau who was one of the most colourful figures of his time.

Mlle. Maxa Nordau speaks with enthusiasm of her tour of the United States. She is anxious to see the people of a new country, become acquainted with its art, learn some of its mannerisms. A thorough student of American literature, Mlle Nordau has expressed a desire to meet some of America's novelists, for some of whom she has a great admiration. Her particular interest lies in the direction of American Art Galleries. It is probable that when coming to America she will bring some of her paintings which have been bought by the French Government for exhibition purposes in this country.

Editor,
CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW.

Out of an inherited respect for the ancient function of the synagogue and the comparatively more recent function of the rabbinate one, one has repeatedly refrained from protesting at the loose writing and looser thinking apparent in some of your contributed editorials.

Take for example those new scapegoats the Zionists. It seems every uncontrolled pen and unfounded opinion is directed against the Zionists for not succumbing to a maudlin and insincere appeal for unity in the Jewish camp. They who have been and they who are the classic example of a central unifying force in Jewry! Last week a well-meaning but prejudiced and ecstatic writer, in a pontifical manner, reprimanded them for not working in harmony with the Joint Distribution people in their fifteen-million-dollar campaign. This week another self-constituted authority and newly-arisen guide scolds them for not turning the other cheek to the Agudath Israel. What utter absurdity betraying once again in those two editorials a complete failure to grasp the trend in modern Jewish affairs. The psychology of such people is a strange one; for them it is always the Zionists or lone nationalists who are "narrow-minded zealots" or are "fanatics"—how they love to dwell on these two adjectives!

In truth, students of Jewish affairs, such as one would expect to find on your editorial staff, know that the most sinister and destructive of clerical forces in Jewry is the reactionary and traitorous Agudath Israel. And the leaders and adherents of the Joint are the most conservative at the opposite extreme in Jewish life. The leaders of the J. D. C. —and it is not an unrelated fact that these are the same superficially opinionated Jews who view Judaism as an "ethical" system only—have acted in a flagrantly dishonourable manner in treating their numerous promises for the immediate creation of a Jewish Agency as a "scrap of paper." Searching for a cause to which their banners could be attached these anything—but—Palestine Jews started a movement which threatened irreparable disunion and harm in setting up Crimea as a substitute for Palestine; a programme that has since been modified solely because of public opinion and the unforeseen economic breakdown of Polish Jewry. Are the Zionists to be accused of non-co-operation when they precisely have been the ones who frantically sought unity and peace in Israel? This bowing by your writers before the moneyed class is undignified in Jewish public life and reveals both the logic and wisdom that passeth all understanding.

I am not defending Zionist policy. It has more competent critics and more valiant defenders than those gracing your columns. Take for a ready instance the growth of the Revisionist party—a party which can only tolerantly smile at the unadulterated rhetoric and bombast its leader received at the hands of one of your editorial writers this week. Only the needs of Palestine, the exigencies of present conditions and future necessities, can reasonably lead us either to disagree with or support Mr. Jabotinsky's platform; doctrinaire idealism that has no basis in reality cannot be placed in the way of the higher, nobler and more complete idealism—the welfare of the land and its historic people. But never have we read criticism, as in most of your similar editorials, so high-falutin', so pompous, yet so absolutely undisturbed by elementary facts.

One of your editors should read Achad HaAm and a few other qualified interpreters of Judaism for information on such things as "assimilation." Another must learn that there are at least fifteen outstanding planks in Mr. Jabotinsky's platform. In all fairness these should be treated and not only the one which seems to him the most far-fetched. But why, Mr. Editor, go on? By now my meaning must be amply clear.

Sincerely yours,
LIONEL M. GELBER.

P.S.—It is particularly amusing when the name of so famous a figure in the Jewish world as Revisionist leader's is persistently mis-spelled. Mr. Mencken and now Mr. Jabotinsky lend honour to each other and the REVIEW writers quaintly bless the union.

Toronto, February 22, 1926.

The Editor,
CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW:

Permit me to reply through your valuable columns to the ideas and sentiments expressed in your contributed editorial of February 19, entitled, "No, Mr. Jabotinsky."

It is not without hesitation and regret that I assume the burden of critic of your able contributing editor. But having learned to know Mr. Jabotinsky as I did on his last visit to our city, and having had an outline and discussion of his ideas and policies, I should not be true to myself if I permitted to pass unchallenged such public remarks concerning him as are expressed in such editorial. Your worthy contributing editor must labour under misinformation or misinterpretation of Jabotinsky's policy or of both, else he would not make utterances such as "No, Mr. Jabotinsky, we do not like your military spirit. We fear that you are still enamoured of the gleam of your buttons of your uniform and of the Sam Browne belt which must have become you too well when you were a fighting lieutenant."

Rabbi Isserman's editorial would have us believe that Palestine is a disarmed country without military paraphernalia, where life is safe and wherein an ideal spirit of peace is prevalent, a state of affairs which Jabotinsky would desecrate with his chauvinistic and militaristic policy. This belief and attitude is an illusion. Palestine at the present time has a population of about 800,000, less than one-quarter of whom are Jews. The Jewish people in order to obtain a completely ideal Hebrew life, must form at least 51 per cent. of the Palestinian population within the next twenty-five years. How is such majority to be attained? The only logical answer is by Jewish mass immigration. No native people ever permitted into their country the mass immigration of persons intent upon building up a separate national life and culture with further intentions of eventually assuming the dominant role therein. Those who are closely in touch with conditions in Eretz Israel, admit that the Arab sentiment has not improved perceptibly in the last few years. If Arab sentiment changed at all, it has become crystallized in its opposition to Jewish mass immigration. Should the present immigration continue, and it must in face of all opposition and obstacles, the Arabs who are an ancient race with ancient traditions and pride will attempt to check it by force. The whole Palestinian armed force to-day, including police, frontier guards and all branches of the military service, consists of barely 1,500 men scattered throughout the length and breadth of the country. This force is wholly inadequate to cope with any serious emergency. When one remembers that the small area of Toronto with a population of 600,000, possesses a police force of better than 700 men, exclusive of Dominion and Provincial police, and a militia force of about 5,000 who are always available for maintaining order, it then dawns upon us what a dangerously inadequate force is provided for Palestine's peace and security. What would our pacifists say if Arab riots even on the scale of 1919 were to re-occur? During one of such disturbances, our conscientious objectors and pacifists telephoned Governor Stoors and asked him why he didn't call out the soldiers to suppress the riots. "I did," replied the Governor. "But why don't the soldiers shoot at the rioters?" was the indignant reply. "Let someone else do the dirty work, we'll keep our hands clean," is the attitude of such pacifists.

Now what does Jabotinsky really want by advocating the reformation of the Jewish Legion? He does not wish a special Jewish army in Palestine, recruited from the colonists and commanded exclusively by them to be at their disposal for whatever purpose they might desire. Jabotinsky suggests that the Jewish people through the World Zionist Organization request the British Government to restore the Jewish Legion, which should number 5,000 men wholly recruited in the Diaspora and forming part and parcel of the British Army. Its duty will consist of policing the interior and guarding the frontiers of Palestine. Jabotinsky believes that the British Government would eventually agree to such request. The fact that the Legion would arrive as a British contingent from Europe and would not be recruited locally would make it harmless in so far as Arab irritation is concerned. But even if the Arabs protested, what of it? They have been protesting right along at every concession made to the Jewish people. But the great difference between the present and the new state of affairs would be this, that at the present time the Arabs are in a position to back their protests with effective force, while with a Jewish legion present in Palestine to maintain peace and order (and not attack, massacre or pillage the Arabs), even if the Arab protests were to increase 50 per cent. these would be ineffective and harmless, and should entirely disappear when the Jews become a majority in our homeland.

The above recited facts and daily events in Palestine warrant the formation of the Jewish Legion as advocated by him. The J. T. A. reported on the 16th of February that the Palestinian Gendarmerie of 500 has been demobilized and that the whole Hebrew press of Palestine immediately protested vehemently against this further reduction of the already inadequate police force, especially so in view of the fact that crimes have increased in that country during the year 1925. Surely the people on the spot ought to know local conditions best, and according to reliable information the huge majority, if not the entire Palestinian Jewish population, would welcome the reformation of the Jewish Legion as advocated by Jabotinsky.

There is no conflict between the ideals of Isaiah or Sokolow and the ideas of Jabotinsky. They can and must harmonize if our national home is to be the realization of our 2,000-year old dream.

Yours respectfully,
J. J. GLASS.

Editor,
CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW:

Evidently the writer of the editorial entitled "No, Mr. Jabotinsky" in the last issue of your journal has forgotten a number of statements which he placed forth not so long ago in the same columns concerning the mental workings of reporters. To him the saddest event in the late Wise incident in New York was not so much what that worthy divine actually did say, since the contentious statements were well-known elements in a reform rabbi's credo; rather the most lamentable thing in the whole business and what seemed to him most indicative of medievalism and reaction was the fact that on the report of a single metropolitan newspaper a group of orthodox rabbis should have condemned and excommunicated him without finding out what the whole truth of the matter was.

In the case of this editorial dealing with Mr. Jabotinsky and his policies we find Rabbi Isserman tearing out a single instance of the context of the speech and subjecting it to a thorough

MONUMENT NATIONAL.

The Hollander Troupe will present for the first time in Montreal the well-known literary play, "Moshke Chazir."

This play, "Moshke Chazir," by I. D. Bercovitch, is one of his greatest works.

The play will be shown on the following nights: Friday, Saturday and Sunday, February 26, 27 and 28.

It is evident that from the moment the curtain rises to its final fall that the directors have spared no costs or energy in giving to the production the proper colouring and scenic efforts.

Hannah Hollander the leading lady, has an exceptionally good part this week that shows up her fine acting to perfection.

Those who have never attended any of the Jewish plays will find this week's show well worth while.

every friday

Well, it seems that the Zionist leaders in this neck of the woods have been running a temperature over that editorial of Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman, associate editor of the CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW, in which he called unfortunate and deplorable the attitude of A. J. Freiman, president of the Canadian Zionist Organization, toward the Joint Distribution Committee's campaign for funds. Some of the Zionists were grieved, others were highly incensed and still others just plain sore. It is safe to say that by now the crisis has passed, for no matter how ardent people are, they can't toss feverishly forever. Little by little the pulse beat becomes normal and folks who reviled each other's ancestors and sneered at the gubernia of origin last week are not only nodding to each other again, but they may at this very moment be dividing a whole roast goose between each two of them.

However, it is alleged to have been grand while it lasted. Rafters shook down splinters, telephone wires sizzled from ardent Zionist to ardent Zionist, all the best-known epithets and figures of speech were collected and used, plans were laid, plots thickened, and doubtless some people got hernia and will have to be sewed up later at the expense of the Keren Hayesod. Illiberal people, Americanische Yehudim or out-and-out Goyim might say that all this is not good form, but even they would agree that it certainly is one hundred and fifty per cent. disputation, to indulge in which should be the periodic privilege of those who supply the heat, energy, light and funds that make the organization wheels go 'round. Only the most exacting, carping critics would say that these—er—arguments are bad for a cause. They are good for it because they stimulate interest and reaffirm loyalties.

Thus the Zionist leaders should feel indebted to Rabbi Isserman and the REVIEW because his editorial started a rumpus and because they actually needed some voice from among them to tell them a few truths. He warned them not to degenerate into such fanaticism that their ideal would seem more important than the starving Jews in Russia who need immediate relief: bread, now, to-day, this minute. Rabbi Isserman warned them that fanaticism that says "all for Zionism and naught for European relief" alienates many of Palestine's best friends and should be combatted by the Zionists. Isn't that the truth? Any sane, practical Zionist should read Mr. Freiman's presidential message and weep to think that the leader of this Dominion-wide Jewish organization could not take a more humanitarian attitude toward the suffering Jews of Russia than openly to oppose a campaign for funds with which to help them. Those closest to the president should have a feeling of anxiety rather than pride to hear their leader shove aside the miserable helpless in the fear that the Zionist cause will be harmed. Many a National Fund box is filled and many a subscription pledged with the thought of Jewish suffering in mind. Is this Jewish suffering any less keen because it goes on in Russia? No, and for that reason not a line of Mr. Freiman's presidential attack on the Joint Distribution Committee's campaign was published in this paper.

Mr. Freiman might have done more for his own cause had he said less against the other. He could have called upon the shirkers in every community who are unaffiliated with any group and down on no lists. They get by quietly, year after year, without giving to any cause, even those they favour. Mr. Freiman might have asked help of those who give only to Federation. There are such men in every community and they are called leaders, too. As happened recently in Toronto, when a meeting for the J.D.C. was called, they simply didn't turn up. They were behind the rampart of their Federation subscriptions. Mr. Freiman might have inaugurated a campaign among Jewish non-Zionists instead of among the Goyim as in the Montreal Keren Hayesod campaign—a move which seems to convey an impression of weakness of the Zionist organization and one which the Toronto Zionists have had the good sense to decide against. Mr. Freiman should have urged the Zionists to volunteer their very able organization machines in all communal undertakings in exchange for help from other organizations and movements. He could have discouraged rifts in the communities by advising his co-workers to be less clannish and more tolerant toward the ever-present problem of community relief.

What the Zionist president did do by trying to sway the Zionist masses away from an important and urgent cause was to call attention to the inefficiency and lack of system prevalent here with regard to giving. A great deal of money goes from Canadian Jews to worthy Jewish causes and local causes, but often there seems to be a most unfair distribution. No one will deny that something is wrong when money can be obtained fairly easily by professional schnorrers and others for almost any Jewish cause under the sun except for the poor at the very door-step. Then suddenly money becomes terribly hard to get. This is a problem that needs adjustment unless Canadian Jews are to go on in confusion, inefficiency and friction. There should be a representative committee from each community at large able to sit together somewhat amicably, pass on campaigns for big causes and say how much in reason can be collected for each. Then people would be asked to give something to each good cause instead of all to one.

Social Life about 25 Years Ago— Do You Remember?—

Rev. Nachman Heller, of New York, went to Winnipeg to be principal of the new Hebrew school organized by Shaare Zedeck Synagogue. Forty children attended in three classes. Rev. Heller taught them "God Save the King" translated into classical Hebrew. The vacant lot adjoining the synagogue was secured as a site for a school and about $809 was subscribed at a meeting. Principal donors were: T. Finklestein, $150; B. Weidman, $100; and Baleoski, $100. Officers of the Hebrew Literary Society: M. M. Finklestein, president; A. Skaliter treasurer; B. Sardner, vice-president; Dr. Heller, librarian; Max J. Finklestein, secretary; councillors, D. Boyaner and J. Helman. In Ottawa, on their thirty-fourth wedding anniversary, Mr. and Mrs. A. Rosenthal were at home. The drawing room was lighted by coloured electric lights and pink shaded candles and flowers decorated it. Mrs. Rosenthal, in black satin brocade, received 150 guests. The skirt of her dress had a lace frill edged with satin ribbon and the waist was trimmed with a real lace yoke and sleeves and her flowers were violets and white roses. She wore diamonds as her jewelry. Mrs. Rosenthal was assisted by her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Arthur Rosenthal, in white mousseline-de-soie over white taffeta, with ruffles edged with narrow black velvet baby ribbon. Others assisting were Misses Martin, Dale, Nye, Freeman (of Montreal), Bearman, Marks and Mesdames Blyth, Brownlee and George J. Hawkins. At a tea given in Ottawa in aid of the Maternity Hospital Mrs. Rosenthal was among those presiding at the tea table. In Kingston B. Silver was head of the Zionists. In Montreal Lazarus Cohen presided at a meeting of German and Polish Jews in Shaar Hashomayim Synagogue. An application by I. L. Michaelson to have certain minutes of the congregation expunged was concurred in. A resolution expressing full confidence in the ability and sincerity of the president in carrying on the affairs of the congregation from his election five years previous, was adopted. A motion to refund the costs incurred by Mr. Cohen, $500, in defending the suits instituted by Mr. Michaelson, was adopted. Mr. Cohen, who had been asked to vacate the chair during the foregoing proceedings, resumed his seat and refused to accept the money voted him.

notions of their own physical competence. He is the "crystallization of the new Jewish attitude towards athletics." Sophie Irene Loeb is praised for her articles on Palestine which appeared in the "New York Evening World." Walter Lippmann, the chief editorial writer of the "New York World," has "rarely, if ever, identified himself with specifically Jewish affairs. But his editorial policy on the 'World' should be enough to make all Jews eager to claim him. His broad-minded liberalism, his absolute independence and his championing the cause of those who have had injustice done them have stamped the "New York World" as America's most significant general newspaper. The writer, a Christian, concludes his article thus: "Each of these five Jews has done something concrete and specifically noteworthy. Their attainments have not been confined to Jews; their influence—for good—has extended beyond their own particular race. They have made America regard them as the five outstanding representatives of the Jewish race in 1925."

The above selection and estimate is interesting. There is no occasion to comment on its inclusions and exclusions. Other writers would, no doubt, find other names for other reasons. What does interest us is that it is so easy to find noteworthy Jews making valuable contributions to so many different phases of American life through their Jewishness. It would be an instructive experiment to start a list of the ten most important Jews in Canada at the present day. Could the average reader of Jewish journals in Canada compile such a list? Have we ten names, sufficiently known, whose achievements would justify their inclusion in such a list? What would be the basis for the selection? The attempt to create such a list would have this great value. It would make us set forth what are the fields of service to the community, or to the state, or to the general weal, that could be signalled out as valuable contributions. We sense danger in the proposal to start such a selection. There would be an immediate demand for a "territorial basis." Many worthy people would feel hurt, and would discontinue their useful work. But, at the same time, it ought not to be left to the rabbi at the funeral to say the only good things that can be said. Have we any Jews as yet in Canada whose fiftieth or sixtieth or seventieth birthday could reasonably be publicly celebrated? Or is the thirteenth birthday the only anniversary that a Jew is entitled to celebrate publicly? In what work of value are Jews engaged in Canada? We may not, perhaps, at the moment, be able to draw up a list, though an attempt might be worth while and helpful. The time will come, however, when such lists will be possible. What we may well ask, then, is not for the list of noteworthy Jews in 1925, but for the list of noteworthy Jews in 1926. Who is ambitious enough to wish to merit inclusion? There are many opportunities.

PLAN NOW FOR THAT PACIFIC COAST AND ALASKA TRIP YOU INTEND TO TAKE NEXT SUMMER

Next summer forget the cares of business or profession and take a trip to Western Canada, the Pacific Coast or Alaska. There's satisfaction in this kind of a vacation—a swift journey through never-before-seen country, restful stops at splendid resort hotels, and, when you reach the Canadian Rockies, gorgeous vistas of lake, forest and towering mountain peaks.

There is never an idle moment if you travel the Canadian National Route on radio-equipped trains. Crossing the vast prairie country, the granary of the Empire, is always interesting. Then there is Jasper National Park and Jasper Park Lodge of continent-wide fame. There are mountains on all sides, sky-piercing giants, snow-capped, massive, many of which have never been scaled.

From Jasper National Park is a never-ending succession of mountains—and more mountains—lovely valleys, turbulent rivers and dashing waterfalls until you reach the coast at Vancouver or Prince Rupert.

To make the most of your trip the voyage through the sheltered scenic seas of the North Pacific should be taken from Vancouver to Prince Rupert or Alaska. On the voyage you will see from splendid sea-going steamers, alluring inlets, towering headlands and tumbling icy streams and glaciers. On the return journey, see Kitwanga and its totem poles, Mount Robson, the highest peak in the Canadian Rockies, and again to Jasper National Park.

These trips, as mapped out by Canadian National Railways, are not surpassed anywhere and furnish a liberal education on Canada to our Canadian people.

Summer tourist fares are effective between May 15 and September 30, with return limit of October 31, at a minimum of cost.

Make sure of your Western trip this summer by planning ahead. Any Canadian National Agent will give you full information and illustrated booklets.

SWISS JEWS CELEBRATE JUBILEE

The Jews of Switzerland recently celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of the revision of the Swiss Federal Constitution by which Jews were given equal rights with the rest of the population. Several cantons had abolished anti-Jewish laws some time before that but it was not until the negotiations with France for a commercial treaty that the question of Jewish emancipation was brought up. Great Britain and the United States also made efforts in the direction of inducing the Swiss Government to grant emancipation to the Jews. In December, 1864 the Federal Council caused a plebiscite to be taken on the question, and the articles granting equal citizenship rights to the Jews were passed by a majority vote polling 170,032 for, and 149,401 against the measure.

THE CHATEAU FRONTENAC, QUEBEC, AND WINTER SPORTS PROGRAMME

With seasonable weather prevailing and a nice blanket of snow on the ground, winter sport season in Quebec City is now well under way. The snow-wreathed beauty and exhilaration of a winter vacation are a growing need. Winter sports are quick and effective restoratives, bringing to you the enjoyments of glowing youth, up in the spruce country, where amidst the colour, mirth and hospitality of old Quebec, the true winter carnival spirit is to be found.

The recent fire at the Canadian Pacific's famous hotel, the "Chateau Frontenac," has caused no interruption in the social activities, there being ample accommodations and public rooms for guests, nor in the winter sports programme arranged by the Sports Director of Chateau Frontenac and the Frontenac Winter Sports Club. Organized activities and interesting events daily, include skating, show-shoeing, hockey, ski-ing, Mardi Gras Carnival, etc. Vari-coloured costumes present a brilliant spectacle. The season terminates with the open championship bob-sled races February 27.

Hotel reservations arranged. Full particulars of railroad and sleeping car fares gladly furnished on application to any Canadian Pacific Agent.

NEGATIVE WINS IN DEBATE ON SEPARATE SCHOOLS

About 500 persons attended the debate in the King Edward Hotel Monday evening on: "Resolved that there be established in Canada a separate school system for the Jews." Affirmative, M. Pusitz, H. P. Green and O. Brown, of the Academy Club; negative, D. Sher, S. Narofsky and S. Rubinoff, of the Menorah Society of the University of Toronto. All six speakers were University students; the chairman was L. M. Singer, president of Canadian Conference of Bnai Brith; and the judges were A. Cohen, Sol. Kaufman and Dr. A. Brodey. A vote on the merits of the question at the conclusion of the debate showed that the audience considered it a draw.

To suggest a nation-wide system of separate schools would be impossible, was the opening contention of the speakers for the affirmative. In the first place, education in Canada was purely a provincial matter, and secondly, it was only in Ontario and Quebec that there existed sufficiently large communities of Jews to warrant adequate support of individual institutions. They accordingly centred their attention upon Quebec as a logical place where to begin the experiment. Messrs. Pusitz and Brown showed how separate schools had been the salvation of the Jewish religion throughout the centuries, and how the absence of distinctive academic training had resulted in many countries in the complete disappearance of the Jewish minority. H. P. Green proved the demoralizing influence that was exerted upon the moral consciousness of the Jewish child when he came in contact with Gentile teachings in the public schools and found conflict between them and the precepts taught in his home.

Segregation into separate schools would inevitably result in fostering misunderstanding and prejudice between Jew and Gentile, claimed the debaters for the negative. The educational system in Canada was an enlightened and purely secular one. Jewish parents need have no fear for the effects of general training upon the Jewishness of their children, for there was absolutely no clash to be found. Evidence was submitted from the general press to illustrate the antagonism aroused among Protestants against the endeavours of Catholics to further their separate school system, and a similar and even accentuated reception was foreseen for the proposed Jewish system. The Jews of Canada, declared the negative, were in possession of a strong tradition and a solid religious consciousness that was in no danger of being disintegrated, and that was being constantly strengthened by the many religious schools and synagogues that existed.

Rabbi Isserman's Editorials

are Polish Jews. Where were they last Sunday afternoon? Where were they when a group of earnest men endeavoured to raise some funds to aid their brethren and their sisters in their former habitat? We grant that the problem of relief for Polish Jewry is a Jewish communal problem, which the entire Jewish community must face and solve. We have always advocated the elimination of the geographical modifier before the term Jew. We believe that we are our brother's helpers, that wherever humanity suffers, we are vitally concerned and morally obligated. But yet it is not too much to expect that when Jews in Poland suffer, the Jews in Canada and the United States, who themselves migrated from Poland not so long ago, whom a turn in the wheel of fortune brought to a more tolerant and enlightened land, ought to be the first to step forward to organize for the relief of their former townsmen. They ought to raise the standard, and they ought to stir the consciences of their fellow-Jews. If the Polish Jews of Canada fail Polish Jewry in this crisis, from whom can they expect help? We want to know where the Polish Jews of Toronto were last Sunday? They were not at their mass meeting.

We believe that the meeting itself was premature, and though inspired by noble motives, was yet ill-advised. But that does not excuse the Polish Jews.

The problem of Polish relief cannot be handled by a group of enthusiasts in any one Jewish community. It requires big constructive effort, on an international scale. Such an effort the Joint Distribution Committee is making. Its drive for $15,000,000 in the United States is meeting with success, and Toronto, like other Canadian communities, will do its share towards it. The J.D.C. is at the present time the only agency with machinery and equipment to do relief properly. We therefore hope that all those who sympathize with the lot of Polish Jewry, will support the J.D.C., and concentrate all efforts and energies to upholding its hands. The way to do European relief is not by the old "pushke" method, but by mobilizing scientifically the conscience and the means of Jewry.

MONA BATES, FAMOUS PIANIST, BACK IN CANADA

A musical event of the most widespread interest to Canadians takes place early in March, when Mona Bates, a former Hamiltonian, who has returned to Canada after spending several years in European musical centres, will be heard again in the concert platform in Massey Hall.

Mona Bates was born in Burlington, made her first public appearance in Hamilton at the age of seven, became later a star pupil and honour graduate of Toronto Conservatory in her early 'teens, has been solo artist with the New York Symphony and other famous orchestras in American tours and for the past three years has lived in Europe where she made an enviable record in many Old World cities as an artist of the rarest ability.

She has made brilliantly successful appearances in London, Prague, Vienna, Budapesth and Dresden and has now returned to Canada with a reputation firmly established on both sides of the Atlantic as one of the leading pianists of the day.

MORRIS CAR OF ENGLAND COMES TO CANADA

Perhaps the most interesting newcomer to the Canadian motoring world this year is the celebrated Morris car of England. Morris Cowley and Morris Oxford, the two standard designs of this wonderful motor are to be seen on display in Toronto and other Ontario centres.

A car which gives amazing mileage to the gallon, which is built to endure for fifteen years and which is distinctly novel and attractive in appearance—the Morris is rousing great interest and enthusiasm.

There is a real driving power behind Morris Motors in Canada. J. W. Pickavant, a man who made a success in British motoring activities is the Canadian agent, and is placing these "Buy British and Be Proud of It" products aggressively before the Canadian public. The main display for Ontario is located at 1262 Yonge Street, Toronto.

The history of Morris progress is one of the most fascinating stories of British industrial history. The "News of the World" told the story in brief form, recently, as follows:

On a grey, dull day twenty-two years ago, a little group of men stood in a courtyard in Oxford City listening to an auctioneer selling up the effects of a small motor engineering concern gone into premature bankruptcy. At the back of the group a medium-sized figure stood, shivering in rain-drenched overalls anxiously waiting for certain of his own tools to come under the hammer. He bought back as many as the small amount of money that was then at his command could purchase. Fifty pounds was the sum total of his worldly wealth.

That mechanic was W. R. Morris, the man who has produced more than half the total number of cars sold in England, and, although perhaps not super-rich, as some people understand the term, he has undoubtedly made one of the greatest successes in business within living memory. To-day Mr. Morris owns and controls seven separate factories, six in Great Britain and one in France.

His favourite tools bought back at the auction, he set out for himself in an old disused garage in Long Wall Street, and began by sheer hard work to build up his present enormous organization in connection with which more than one million people are now directly and indirectly employed. At first he was content with repair jobs and the manufacture of pedal bicycles, and examples of the Morris bicycle are still to be seen in Oxfordshire. He rode these machines in competitions on road and track with considerable success.

Strong and wiry, he was physically superior to most men of his age and weight, although his health to-day bears evidence of the strain he imposed upon himself years ago. With the advent of petrol, he started on motor-cycles, and designed and built a complete engine with his own hands, as "the best way of learning all about the inside." In 1913, just prior to the war, Mr. Morris determined to build a car of his own that should contain all the good points and none of the bad of the several different makes that had passed, and were passing, daily through his hands.

The Morris car, of which there are 100,000 on the road to-day, was the result. Mr. Morris developed the idea of purchasing the component parts from specialists.

The old military college at Cowley was converted to a factory, and a building previously devoted to ladies' corsets was taken over as a body works. Driving his own car in competitions, and working, as he himself once put it, "twenty-five hours a day," Mr. Morris's business rapidly grew until the demand for engines was so great that it could not be met.

It was then that Mr. Morris and Mr. Landstad, his works manager, went to America to investigate engineering productions methods. They came back not over impressed by what they had seen on the other side of the Atlantic. An order was given, however, for a supply of engines made to the Morris design, and the production of a few cars with these units installed had taken place, when the contemplated expansion was stopped by the War.

Immediately after hostilities, Morris Motors, Limited, recommenced the manufacture of cars, and the same design was continued. From that day W. R. Morris has never looked back. During the year ending August 31, 1925, 48,512 Morris cars were produced, this approximating to half the total of cars manufactured in Great Britain. Mr. Morris is still a young man, for he is now only forty-seven. He was born at Worcester although the home of his parents was originally in Oxford, and he has lived in Oxford practically all his life. His hobby is work, with a little golf at intervals "to keep his chassis lubricated."

denunciation. Was that all that Mr. Jabotinsky said, is this the whole policy of the Revisionist group which he leads as the editorial would lead one to believe?

An injustice has been done this new group and especially Mr. Jabotinsky. No one could endorse such a ridiculous policy as suggested in the editorial as evidently emanating from the speaker. One would seem to think that Mr. Jabotinsky is ready to drench Palestine in blood, to sacrifice every Jewish inhabitant in that country to his selfish militaristic desires. The truth lies as far from this as possible. The speaker at Massey Hall that evening made it amply clear what were his reasons in advocating the creation of an armed force to protect the Palestinian Jews.

If assent is given to the fundamental proposition that one desires to see Palestine rebuilt as the Jewish homeland, one must also accede to the implications of such a policy. A Jewish state in that country means a Jewish majority which, if space permitted, might rightfully be mentioned as demonstrating the other fourteen points in the Revisionist programme pointing to the method Mr. Jabotinsky would employ to create such a majority. With the rise of the general level of education in Palestine among the Arab youth, who are reaping the cultural and material benefits following in the wake of the Jewish settlement, there must inevitably come some feeling of dissatisfaction and unrest with the visible evidence of a rapidly increasing Jewish population. This may or may not lead to some outbreak on the part of those who have possessed the land so long. Why go through the needless heroism of a Trumpeldor? Perchance if Tel-Hai is attacked again it may be lost to us permanently. The Revisionists do not advocate an army in Palestine. They certainly at no time ever suggested arming the Jewish colonists. What with the pernicious agitation rife in the country at present, as practised by some of the Arab groups most likely sponsored by some European sources, and with the rise of a new class-conscious Arab race in a few years, can we expect that all will be serene and peaceful?

It is a matter of policy with Great Britain that she maintains an army in the east to protect her possessions. Why not then, in the words of Mr. Jabotinsky, encourage the Jewish youth, whose zeal for Palestine has been so clearly demonstrated, to enroll in such a force which is to be stationed outside of Palestine in order to be prepared for any eventuality? This is not militarism, for that certainly is a characteristic foreign to the Jew. It is merely facing the facts in connection with the re-creation of a state which is to be inhabited by Jews. Rabbi Isserman patently does not wish to recognize these facts and contents himself with a metaphorical waving of the cedars of Lebanon in one hand and with a brandishing of high-sounding Isaianic quotations against war in the other. Certainly the Jews interested in the Palestinian experiment wish peace in the country and not war. They have never suggested expropriation of the Arab land or any other such violent actions which might lead to strife. Mr. Jabotinsky in no uncertain terms made these points clear and to hold him up as an ogre of militarism and warfare is a most unfair and unnatural distortion of the case.

EDWARD E. GELBER,
Secretary, Revisionist Committee of Toronto.
